

why darfur AGAIN?

This is Hawa, pictured above, with her mother and younger sister. Hawa is twelve years old, and she has now lived in a refugee camp for half of her life. She still remembers fondly what life in her village used be like.

Follow i-ACT Expedition #9 as we travel, once again, to Darfuri refugee camps. Meet the people. Hear their stories. Participate.

Same day video webcasts start December 9, 2010
www.stopgenocidenow.org / twitter: @iact / facebook: i-ACT

why darfur AGAIN?

This is Hawa, pictured above, with her mother and younger sister. Hawa is twelve years old, and she has now lived in a refugee camp for half of her life. She still remembers fondly what life in her village used be like.

Follow i-ACT Expedition #9 as we travel, once again, to Darfuri refugee camps. Meet the people. Hear their stories. Participate.

Same day video webcasts start December 9, 2010
www.stopgenocidenow.org / twitter: @iact / facebook: i-ACT

why darfur AGAIN?

This is Hawa, pictured above, with her mother and younger sister. Hawa is twelve years old, and she has now lived in a refugee camp for half of her life. She still remembers fondly what life in her village used be like.

Follow i-ACT Expedition #9 as we travel, once again, to Darfuri refugee camps. Meet the people. Hear their stories. Participate.

Same day video webcasts start December 9, 2010
www.stopgenocidenow.org / twitter: @iact / facebook: i-ACT

why darfur AGAIN?

This is Hawa, pictured above, with her mother and younger sister. Hawa is twelve years old, and she has now lived in a refugee camp for half of her life. She still remembers fondly what life in her village used be like.

Follow i-ACT Expedition #9 as we travel, once again, to Darfuri refugee camps. Meet the people. Hear their stories. Participate.

Same day video webcasts start December 9, 2010
www.stopgenocidenow.org / twitter: @iact / facebook: i-ACT